CLARKE MOTION UP FOR SENATE ACTION

Victory in Sight Tomorrow for Opponents of Ship Purchase Measure.

ADMINISTRATION FORCES TO RALLY TO GORE BILL

Republicans Ready to Continue Filibuster-Insist Opponents Will Weaken in Few Days.

When the Senate meets tomorrow at noon, after a recess since Friday, the Clarke motion to recommit the adminstration ship purchase bill wil be up for disposition. For a week the dem crats have postponed action on this motion, hoping against hope that they ould be able to marshal their full strength against it, or that they might win over enough votes to give them the whip hand again. But although Sen-Newlands of Nevada is expected to reach Washington tonight, adding one vote to the administration forces the opponents of the motion will still be in the minority, unless by some chance Senator Smith of South Carohna also should arrive. In that event the vote would stand 48 to 48 to recommit the bill with instructions to report it out in amended form, and the Vice President could decide the matter in favor of the administration sen-

But Senator Smith is not expected to reach Washington in time, for his wife is critically ill in South Carolina. It is probable, therefore, that if the Clarke motion to recommit without instructions is allowed to come to a vote it will be carried tomorrow. Then the administration leaders will attempt to avail themselves of the Gore motion to discharge the Senate commerce committee from further consideration of a ship purchase bill which he introduced last week and had referred to that committee. This bill is identical with the administration bill except for two amendments which will satisfy some of the republican progressives. And the Gore motion, the democrats believe, can be carried.

Think Democrats Will Weaken.

While the administration leaders continued to insist yesterday that the would be kept Senate to the exclusion of all other ousiness until it had been passed, this was doubted by some of the republican senators. They insisted that the democrats would weaken before many more days had passed, and in order to prevent an extra session would permit the appropriation bills to be taken up, thus effectually sidetracking the ship bill.

The republicans are ready to continue their filibuster against the ship purchase bill should the Gore motion come up or be adopted. If the democrats resort to all-night sessions, as they threaten, the republicans are fortified with speeches, and will talk all day and all night, as they did before the seven democrats, under the leadthe seven democrats, under the lead-ership of Senator Clarke of Arkansas revolted last Monday and caused a di-version in favor of the opponents of the ship bill. The beds which were in-stalled in Senator Gallinger's office, in Senator Gore's office in the Capitol and in the President's room, just off the Senate chamber, upon which weary filibustering senators might rest, are still available and undoubtedly will be called into service should the long night sessions be resumed.

But Twenty-Two Days Left.

Only twenty-two working days, exclusive of Sundays, remain of the present session, and the republicans figure they can talk the entire time if they have to do so to prevent a vote on the Senator Bankhead is one of the democrats who revolted against the ship bill, and he also is chairman of the post office committee which will report to the Senate tomorrow the post office appropriation bill. Should Senator Bankto the Senate to the post of the separate to the separate to take up the post office appropriation bill later in the week, in place of the ship bill, his motion might seceive sufficient votes. Senators on both sides of the chamber are very anxious to get to the appropriation bills and dispose of them in order to prevent a special session. The President might call a special session to pass the ship purchase bill, but senators do not believe that he would do so.

Vice President Marshall ranged th universe and the ages in a speech in his usual happy manner with which he entertained more than 200 students, members of the faculty and friends of the Washington College of Law at the seventeenth annual banquet of the college, held at Rauscher's last night. The Vice President touched on many subjects-from his own declared to be "a position that ought to make one downhearted"-to much needed reforms in the practice of law and to Napoleon Bonaparte, whom he declared was quite a man.

"Not long ago the practice of laws was just like the running of a hand-me-down store," declared the Vice President, explaining his statement by telling of the decision of most cases

INTERCHANGE OF IDEAS ON JITNEY BUS PLANNED

Washington Directors Start Movement for National Organization of Operators.

Interchange of ideas with jitney but co-operation of the Washington service. Mr. Hickey declared, following the meeting last night, that the movement started by the local board of directors looks to the formation of a national organization of jitney bus operators with a central bureau where all the information collected in connection with the operation of the new transportation service may be compalled and with the operation of the new transportation service may be compiled and disseminated. With such a co-operative service, declared Mr. Hickey, the faults of jitney buses in one city could be made known and avoided by the operators in other cities. He believed that the formation of such an association would result in an early perfection of the jitney bus service.

Routes Are Considered.

Much attention also was given at the meeting last night to the question of outes. The decision was reached that the association would lay down the routes to be followed by the various buses, but that those who became members would, to some extent, be al-lowed to express a choice for a paricular route. ticular route.

Jones School was returned a victor in both weight classes in the twelfth division. In the city championship series the senior team contended constantly, but the lightweight team committed the offense of losing one game by default through absence. These teams were weaker than usual in this division for the reason of a lack of strong division competition, although most of the schools of the division took part in the series.

The thirteenth division teams showed improvement of a marked nature. Bell School was not so much of a court fighting aggregation as it has proved to on the diamond, but the vocational boys were far superior to any of the basket ball quints that have emanated from this division. These teams suffer by virtue of no indoor practice or playing court near the schools in that division. Jones School was returned a victor the Decisive Score of 42 1-2 to 11 1-2.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., February 6 .- By winning the wrestling match from the grapplers of Pennsylvania State Col-lege and downing the gymnasts of New York University the Midshipmen made a clean sweep of the five-cornered series of the athletic events at the Naval Academy. The basket ball team was successful, and so were the swimmers and fencers. The story of these contests is published elsewhere in The Star.

The Middies won the wrestling match by a score of 19 to 10 points, and put the gymnastic meet on ice by the decisive score of 42½ to 11½ points. All of the wrestling bouts were keenly contested Only one bout resulted in a fall. That was the special weight, in which Wyatt, Navy, threw Brown of State, in the quick time of one minute and 20 seconds, using a half nelson and body hold. Navy gained three other bouts on decision for the most aggressive work, and one finally was decided a tie, while Penn State gained two on decisions and one on a tie. The victory was sweet revenge for the Middies, for they were trimmed by Penn State last season.

While all of the beats.

was sweet revenge for the Middles, for they were trimmed by Penn State last season.

While all of the bouts were well contested, the heavyweight set-ta, as usual, drew the greatest interest from the spectators, but this developed into the poorest engagement of all. T. W. Harrison, a 165-pounder, who played end on the foot ball team last fall, was the Navy contestant. He went up against the giant Lamb, a member of Penn State's gridiron aggregation. It was a struggle for a hold throughout and neither of the principals went to the mat. The referee finally declared it a draw.

In the gymnastic contest the middles had things all their own way. The best performance of the New Yorkers was in the club swinging, in which Russell tied for first place and they also were credited with one other second and three thirds. The sailors far outshone their opponents in the parallel bars and flying rings events, taking all three places in each.

WEST HAS GREAT CHANCE.

Should Show Well in Golf Tourneys This Year.

NEW YORK, February 6 .- The west will have a golden opportunity to sweep to the crest in the golfing world this year, With the amateur championship staged over the links of the Detroit Country Club the first week of September and the women's champion ship played at the Onwentsia Club golfers have their best opportunity since 1916 to wrest a national title from the eastern contenders.

Francis Ouimet, Jerry Travers, Walter Travis, Oswald Kirkby, Fred Herreshoff and Findlay Douglas will lead the eastern attack, and the task of the western contingent, headed by Chick Evans, will be far from an easy one. However, with the advantage of playing close to "hum" in their favor, the west may prevail.
